

Gabriel Rossman is an assistant professor of sociology at the University of California, Los Angeles. He defended his dissertation, "The Effects of Concentrated Ownership on Media Content" at Princeton University in 2005. His research interests include the mass media, economic sociology, and innovation.